

James Lee Nursery School- Transferable forest skills

Jemma, the Forest School Coordinator has taken James Lee's Forest School, that normally takes place on Wimbledon Common, back into the nursery garden.

Learning whittling
skills with a carrot
rather than a stick!

The tools stay must stay at the bench and must not go to other parts of the nursery.

Saw must be used with vice.

A larger group
of children can get involved in forest school activities now!

They worked out how to make the rope swing work. They worked together using problem solving skills, language that effectively communicated their ideas, and lots of physical and PSED skills too!
